3. Make it Interactive: Turn the learning process into a game. Use colorful charts, stickers, or interactive online resources. Create a class competition to see who can identify and correct the most errors.

4. Peer Editing: Encourage children to edit each other's work. This provides valuable practice and allows them to see different writing styles and errors. This collaborative approach fosters teamwork and critical thinking skills.

5. Regular Practice: Consistent practice is key. Integrate the use of editing marks into daily writing activities. Use different types of writing assignments – like stories, poems, or essays – to reinforce learning.
